I regularly dive into articles from leading ABS 4+ rated journals, such as Accounting Review, Accounting, Organizations and Society, and Journal of Accounting and Economics, as well as other influential publications in the field. This practice has not only deepened my grasp of core theoretical frameworks and empirical methodologies in Accounting but also honed my ability to critically evaluate complex data, identify research gaps, and propose evidence-based insights—skills I believe are essential for success in graduate study.

My long-term career goal is to become a Accounting Manager. To lay a solid foundation for this path, I have proactively developed proficiency in practical skills including Excel, Financial forecasting, Variance analysis. These competencies have been tested and refined through, where I applied Accounting principles to solve real-world challenges, further reinforcing my passion for the field.

What draws me most to Harvard University is not only its strong academic environment and research-oriented curriculum but also its faculty's renowned expertise in Accounting.
